First Thanksgiving Ritual By President's Declaration

Thanksgiving Day in 1890 was proclaimed by President Benjamin Harrison, as a day of prayer and thanksgiving. The holiday was established to honor the memory of the first Thanksgiving celebration in 1621, which took place in Plymouth, Massachusetts. This event marked the beginning of a year of plenty, following a successful harvest after a difficult winter. The holiday has since become a tradition in the United States and is celebrated with family gatherings, food, and special events. The proclamation of President Harrison in 1890 helped to establish the holiday as a permanent fixture on the American calendar.

EASY COME—EASY GO

We should be thankful for everything, for all the good things that have happened to us. We should be thankful for our lives and for the people in our lives. We should be thankful for the things we have and the things we have done. We should be thankful for the opportunities we have had and the opportunities we have missed. We should be thankful for the people who have helped us and the people who have hurt us.
