New Approach To Learning Started In College Library

A new concept in learning at NEO has been added to the college library this year. The new feature is known as the Learning Resource Center.

According to Robert B. Kilman, media coordinator for the center, the purpose of this new aspect in learning is "to present individual instruction."

Why promote individualized instruction? Because NEO does not have a balanced teacher-student ratio. When a classroom is overcrowded an instructor cannot reach out and help each student individually. In a classroom only the aggressive student speaks up when he has a question. What happens to the shy student who never opens his mouth?

Individualized instruction is a method of presenting material to the student without using the instructor as a relay station. The instructor would then become a consultant, in the sense that, after a student has absorbed the information before him, various forms of media, any questions he may have can be worked out with the help of the instructor-consultant.

NEO's library has several ways of communicating information to the student. One means is an audiotutorial system. This system is represented by the use of audiotapes. The library has made available to the students of NEO two audiotape cassette projectors with another taped to records on one, and two ten-minute cassette projectors "Similar to a tv set" with two on one, keyed for the use of cassette.

Kilman stresses that the use of tape-cassette projectors has already proved useful in library-consultation for freshmen English courses.

The Wind

By James Milla

Coach Bill Coggin is hard at work dreaming up another year's activities for the intramural sports program at NED. He has a wide variety of competition planned and hopes to be able to run several different events a month as long as school is in session. Currently, a softball tournament is underway with 11 teams in the mix. Any student who has not signed up to play and wants to can sign up when their floor plays. Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place teams.

Also, anyone who is interested in taking part in an archery tournament or chess tournament should contact Coggin. Students must personally contact him to enter the competition.

Other events planned for the future include touch football, which will begin Oct. 1. Signups will begin Sept. 30 with sign-up sheets in the gym, dorms and student union. A ping pong tournament will be held either on Oct. 10 or November 1, and bowling competition will start around the first of November.

Students must play for the floor of the dorm they live in. Community students are invited to form independent teams and enter the competition. The intramural
