Students violate visitation policy

Linda Lowe

Recently, Dr. Bobby L. Wright, college president, oversaw two verdicts that were passed down by the housing committee in past weeks.

According to the housing committee’s verdicts, two students were to be expelled for various visitation violations.

Dr. Wright recently oversaw this decision and said the students were allowed to remain in school but only on the conditions that they abide by certain restrictions.

"If the restrictions had not been comprehensive, or if these students did not completely understand and agree to the rules, they would not be on campus," said Dr. Wright.

This was just one of many events that took place throughout the academic year, and it served as a reminder of the vibrant and dynamic nature of the university community. The event was a testament to the spirit of togetherness and the importance of community in our lives.
Actress possesses intense ambition

Theatre performances assist dancer with achievements

Sandy Williams

Pursuing the double dilemma of ambition and achievement in the stage, film and television genres, the actress portrays Miss Grand Lake, a small-town beauty pageant queen, in the current production, "Miss Grand Lake." She is also starring in the film "The Last Waltz," directed by Norman Jewison.

"I believe in performing. Quite honestly, I feel that it gets into your blood," said Williams. "Theatre is in my blood. It's a part of me and I enjoy it."

The two projects represent the actress's broad range of talents and her desire to explore different types of roles and experiences.

"Miss Grand Lake" is a part of a national pageant where the pageant queen is crowned at the end of the competition. Williams is excited about the upcoming event and is looking forward to the ceremony.

"I have always wanted to be on stage," she said. "The audience is a part of me and I enjoy their energy."

Williams's role in "The Last Waltz" is as the young love interest of the character played by Robert Redford. The film is a tribute to the iconic band, The Band, and their music.

"I have always been a fan of The Band," she said. "I was thrilled when I was offered the role."

According to Williams, the role was a challenge, as she had to learn the band's music and bring it to life on screen.

"I have always been a fan of The Band," she continued. "I was thrilled when I was offered the role."

With her upcoming projects, Williams is looking forward to continuing her career and exploring new opportunities in the entertainment industry.

Black queen reigns

Recently crowned Miss Black Heritage, Gissome Hatcher dons her title as one of honor and prestige.

"Winning the title was very exciting for me," said the 19-year-old Bartlettville native. "My family and friends were so happy to see me win. I felt very proud, as did their support."

One stipulation of the judging was for the winner to write an essay on the most influential black person in their life.

"I chose to write my essay on Jesse Owens, four time Olympic gold medalist during the late thirties," Hatcher explained. "Since I am in track, he is very influential to me because he accomplished so much in track."

"I hope to go to the Olympics someday and when I think of Owens, it gives me an enormous inspiration," expressed Hatcher.

Along with the essay, the girls were judged through interviews with the judges, the modeling of casual wear, talent (in which Hatcher performed behind the-shoulder look at girl's basketball) and the modeling of formal wear.

"I think I have a good chance of going to the Olympics someday. I continue to work hard and stay in shape," Hatcher expressed with a glint of hope in her eye.

"It has been running for six years and has a time of 51.1 in the 400 meter," Hatcher said. "I think the team is really good, although I am more effective in relay races."

GOLDEN SPIRIT

The baseball team displayed, in their unique way, their Nunsense pride at a recent home basketball game. The act was complete with eye charts for reference, racing cards for cheerleaders, painted faces of blue and gold and newspapers to show they were not interested in the Senators team.

Apathy displayed towards blue and gold day

Bry Robertson

Last semester, the tradition of Blue and Gold Day was reinstated to promote school spirit.

There was a time when the blue and gold flags fluttered high over the campus. They signaled, and pride for this institution, a time when the student body was proud of their strength by displaying blue and gold dress and every Friday.

"Many buildings have lost, or misplaced the flags, as a result, I feel we have lost a little something for the project," explained Dr. Bobby R. Wright, president.

"I believe this would be an excellent way to boost school spirit. It is a very good idea to get back into and we definitely have talked about it, but we just haven't followed through on it," Dr. Wright continued.

According to English instructor Darrel Nipper, who last semester was an avid supporter of blue and gold day, he believes the act of not continuing the practice of blue and gold day was not deliberate.

"I believe we should have the day for all occasions, not just for football. We should also be aware that we all get busy and forget," countered Nipper.

"What I am seeing currently is about one-third of the students do observe the day and I think we could get the flags flying again. This would help them to remember," she said.

Baseball coach Mike Clark feels the project would help to draw larger crowds to support sports other than baseball.

"I think more or less after football season, moral for the other teams is a definite problem," stated Clark. "There have been several occasions when I have encouraged the guys from practice early just so they could attend wrestling tournaments and the like. We always try to support other teams and activities on campus," he explained.

One student offered her opinion of the project. "I do not recognize the gold day only because I have nothing gold to wear. I understand it is meant to boost school spirit, so if more people would recognize the day I would be more likely to wear something gold to wear," she said.

Various other students on campus reported total ignorance of the whole idea of blue and gold day.

Stacey Keech, 19 year old senior from Fairland, noted that he did not observe blue and gold day, "I do not know the purpose of blue and gold day," he replied.
