Delegates attend senate conference

Eight student senate delegates met with the Student Government Association Tuesday in the Student Center to discuss issues of concern to Pittsburg State students.

The delegates, who are elected by the student body, discussed a variety of topics, including student involvement in campus events, academic policies, and budget matters.

One of the main topics discussed was the need for more opportunities for students to participate in decision-making processes. The delegates agreed that increasing student input would lead to a more engaged and informed student body.

Another point of discussion was the importance of fostering a sense of community among students. The delegates noted that by working together, students could address issues more effectively and create a stronger sense of unity.

The delegates also discussed the need for better communication between the student government and the administration. They suggested the creation of a regular meeting schedule to ensure that the needs and concerns of students are being addressed in a timely manner.

Overall, the delegates expressed a commitment to working towards a more inclusive and participatory student government, with the goal of empowering students to have a greater say in the shaping of their educational experience.
Survey reveals attitude shift in college students future

In a recent survey, it was brought out that most of the students, in years to come, will attend college to prepare for a career.

In a study by the Ingersoll Group Inc., during the fall semester 1985, involving students in every state, students were asked to respond to the question, "What do you feel a college education should do for you?"

The students were to rate each item very important, some importance, not important, and do not know.

The available items were to prepare for graduate school, prepare for career, prepare to communicate, appreciation of music.

Other items included were to identify personal goals, identify problems, prepare to be an expert, provide experiences, judge ideas critically, personal advising, develop leadership, make more money, provide awareness, and depth of knowledge.

Also, academic advising program, high quality academics, probably change interests, change collegiate athletics, housing program, intramural athletics, fraternity/sorority system, extracurricular involvement, breadth educated person, civic context, sense of confidence, and bonds on education.

Out of 1,834 students, 94.85 percent of the students rated to prepare for a career as very important. And 8.47 percent rated it to some importance.

Rated second, was to be prepared to be an expert.

Third was to develop depth of knowledge in a specific field, and to be broadly educated, was fourth.

Although, this was taken by, now, high school seniors, it should apply to the college students of today.

Take this college for instance, if this same survey was taken by students here, the most important interest would be, probably, be collegiate athletes.

Not only at this college, but at many colleges and universities in this state. There is a big emphasis placed on athletes, in Oklahoma.

Perhaps, this is good, to provide for leadership and sportsmanship. But what educational benefits does collegiate sports have on college students?

This is to say that collegiate sports are not good for college students, or students in general, but it is to say that not everyone can be a professional athlete.

Further still, much of the things brought out in this survey are important to students.

Moreover, this survey shows that, in the years to come, the student enrollment in colleges and universities, should be larger, and this could provide students. Students that are willing and ready to learn.

One should keep in mind that in the past two years (1981 through 1983) the top four expectations have remained the same.

In conclusion, it should be said, that students should think about what it is that they hope to be like in the years after college.

Only the best for the job will get it, so work hard in an area that interests you, and strive to be a good student all around.

Dear Editor,

A few months ago, a section appeared in the Norse Wind concerning an AU sweep for the school and area. I do not recall who wrote this section, but I do recall some of the questions this article asked.

For example: One of the questions was, why someone doesn't pursue such an idea. I would like to respond, if possible.

I would ask the person one or two questions. I am proud to announce that something is being done, concerning a concept to bring some money to the campus area.

The business, LADY PRODUCTIONS, is bringing a benefit concert to the Miami area. This concert will feature such artists as Maury Ethridge, Vince Gill, Hank Thompson, Janie Fricke, Lacy McAlister, and possibly others.

Also, a benefit concert is to be held in the Aid-Center, will be held on June 1, 1986. Some of the celebrities who will participate include, Hee Haw, Bucky Hester, Steve Owen, Steve Owen, Frank Boykin, Pat Jones and others.

Dear Editor,

The current NJOI neo-planning offers for non-collected students and the public has covered enough offering. Unless one is a member of one of the two teams offered by the school, he may not be in the pool except for the hour and 45 minutes of open play from Thursday and on Sunday.

The time being supplied is inadequate for the need being demanded. On occasions or at the insistence of entertainers, two teams may be combined and allowed to be represented from these players. However, two teams are barely enough space for the four people we had the day we were there. Swimmers are making moves to bounce into one another or dodging those that are a few feet watching their friends dive off.

To prevent these conditions, we could often laugh for hours and divide the hours into open and laps with music.

Milestones

Whitney Houston, daughter of gospel singer Cissy Houston and niece of the popular R&B singer Dionne Warwick, won two American Music Awards.

Houston won Best R&B Album and Song of the Year, with "Saving All My Love For You." She also was voted the year with "Saving All My Love For You" as the best video of the year with "Saving All My Love For You" as the best video of the year.

Houston, 22, still R&B sensation, has only produced one video of the year with "Saving All My Love For You" as the best video of the year.

Winning two American Music Awards, Houston is now a star that not many singers do not have. Houston is also nominated for a Grammy award, as well.
Coed plans career in television

When one month Sharon Kahler, sophomore, on campus, Kahl, as she might be called, has what friends call "surprises," and the reason is the impression of being very confident and well informed.

She is very heavy on basketball, band, school activities, and the things going on here at our school. She seems to handle her schedule very well. I'm carrying 20 hours this semester, and that's a lot of work, but like I said.

Kahler is working towards her communications degree, and she plans to graduate in May. She plans to go on a summer internship at television station in Oklahoma. There she will pursue her main goal, working in television production.

"But I'm interested in the technical side of it," said Kahler. "I'm not very interested in performing in front of the camera. However, many people seem to think that is where I would want to be, but it just never appealed to me."

Kahler was born in Denver, Co., and is of German descent. She has been to college from her hometown of Vinita. However, "homeowns" might be the wrong word to use, and she agrees.

"I never really had one place to call home," she said. "My family moved around a lot, and I have lived in seven different homes in the country, such as Colorado, Missouri, and California."

Kahler came to this institution on a scholarship, and has been involved in a number of campus activities. Such as the theatre, "I wanted to stay close to my family," she said.

After she leaves here next summer, she plans to further education in the television facilities at the University of Oklahoma. She has always been very sure, and I don't know when she'll be."

Kahler is also on the Norman Student Staff that some people on the campus have planned on the group.

"Those people are just jealous. When you are in a group that is in the headlines, like the (Norman Student) are, people are going to naturally be envious, but we've learned not to let it bother us."

One would think that the busy schedule that Kahler, that she might have troubles that are quite a bit more disturbing, but she manages to work them out. She is at home in Vinita, and "I don't write poetry."

"The first time I have poetry published in a Norman magazine. I also practice photography, and have won awards for both my poems and my pictures," she said. Kahler would write, and if he or she ever writes a story.

Kahler also has been a participant in many beauty pageants. She entered in on campus to degree her appearance, and to try and improve her self-confidence.

Kahler also plans to intern at a television station in Oklahoma. There she will pursue her main goal, working in television production.

"I would only do it if they were serious and that's for sure, and only if I had the time," she said. "I like television."

Kahler plans for her future seem to be fitting for her. "I want to have a career," she said. "I want to have a career," she said. "I would have a career in television."

Indeed, it seems that anyone trying to follow his career. Kahler is liable to get a mouthful of dust.

Rose enjoys rodeo excitement

Rose enjoys rodeo excitement, and she has been involved in the rodeo for three years. "I didn't really start rodeoing until I was out of high school," she says. But three years seems to have been enough time for Rose to become one of the Norma rodeo team's best members.

Choosing the events she rode in came easy to Rose. "I first started, I thought bull riding would be the most fun," she says. "It's really pretty easy."

Rose also tried bareback riding, but that didn't last long. "They put you around and hurt you too bad," she said.

Rose also has broken his arm and tore a cartilage in his knee, in addition to being stepped on.

"I didn't start riding saddle bronc horses until I came up here," she said. "But while just standing and looking at them made him want, this can't be taught."
