Senator presents entertainment duo

Hike awaits assent

Ponding approval by the Oklahoma State legislature, the Arkansas State Senate for Higher Education is considering an increase in general enrollment fees and non-reimbursement fees. The proposed increase would make the second consecutive year in many years for state-supported higher education institutions.

"The budget will be cut by 10 percent, which equals a cut of $300,000. To amend these cuts, a 10 percent tuition increase has been proposed," said Dr. Wright, at a recent student senate meeting.

"Also, we may have to cut programs, students will be subject to larger classes and we will not replace retiring faculty, unless absolutely necessary," Dr. Wright said.

\[\text{Other efforts of the bills according to Dr. Wright include: a cut back of activity and a cut of out-of-state students. There may be more cuts.}\]

"Over the years, we have not had four percent of the budget which results in $17,000. This reserve money will be used to make up the $300,000 cut. Also, there will be an increase in dorm costs to cover increased insurance premiums. This increase will average 17 cents per day according to Dr. Wright."

Student fees and tuition should provide additional revenue for support of instruction programs, it should be used for any other purpose, Dr. Wright said.

Diversions

Spring break may be over, but the spirit of spring break is still alive. Many students who were fortunate enough to go to Palm Beach, Fort Lauderdale, etc., linger on the memories of their fun-filled days. However, a few students were unable to go, but they plan on making up for the lost time in the near future. The following are some of the activities that students did during their spring break:

1. Went to the beach and enjoyed the warm weather and the sand. Many students brought along their beach towels and umbrellas to enjoy the sun and sand.

Intern visits campus

Kathy Wilson

From the 1960-63 chief of police for much crime to an intern as a teacher, Regina Bruner has built her career on campus.

Bruner is the police chief at the University of Notre Dame. She is now a criminal justice instructor, as a required law enforcement officer. Internship is usually served by riding along in a police car, but for the first time, Bruner was allowed by the Missouri Southern State College Criminal Justice department to serve her internship as a teacher.

"I decided that since I was doing the teaching field and did not want to become a police officer, that it would be more productive to spend more time with her husband and three boys." Other reasons for not choosing to be a lawyer include the lure of office work, and teaching would allow her to spend more time with her husband and three boys.

"I think the teaching field is a lot of work, but I don't think I could ever have a problem getting a job," said Bruner.

"I enjoy teaching the class. The students were a little surprised at first because they weren't expecting a female criminal justice teacher," said Bruner.

Bruner believes that most of the students in class are looking for an education to get more money in the fields they pursue. You really do need an education to be a cop. This isn't the "Old West." You can't just walk in with a badge and a gun on your hip and be an officer," said Bruner.

Education to expand knowledge of laws and procedures are necessary to be a police officer according to Bruner. Bruner also thinks that the criminal justice field is a wide-open field for women and that there are a lot of legal areas for women.

Besides obtaining a higher education, Bruner has been busy working on a book. The book will be based on an actual case.

"I have always been interested in law, and, if considering being a lawyer," said Bruner.

In possible pursuit of a career as a lawyer, Bruner did investigative "bug work" for local attorneys, but it was the "old West." You can't just walk in with a badge and a gun on your hip and be an officer," said Bruner.

Freshmen joining Crowe and Whisenhunt on the Golden Norse team are Aaron Custer from Illinois and James Campbell from Miami.

The Lady Norse received a blow when Devin Seefeldt, the Norse’s top scorer in the 300-meter hurdles, was taken off the team after the meet.

Woodson was second in the 400-meter dash with a time of 58.32.

A sign of the times, Seefeldt’s absence was not felt by the Norse, who placed second in the 15-meter semi-final on Friday with a time of 5.30.

Woodson also was second in the 50-meter hurdles with a time of 8.85.

Alana Gray was second in both the 100 and 200 meter races.
