NATIVE AMERICAN

Students dance at Olympics

By Jerry Williams

Two members of the Northeastern A&M student body will be among the more than 800 Native American participants in the upcoming closing ceremonies of the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Terry Maricirich Yazzie and Wani Euran will leave Miami Wednesday, Feb. 20, to attend the four-day closing ceremonies. Both students are members of the Painted Horse Wardance Society of Wyandotte.

"We're going to the Olympics to see the athletic competition, but we're going to perform nine hoopos ceremonial dances as part of a group of more than 800 Native Americans from across the United States," said Euran.

Euran, a freshman pre-med major from Miami, is a member of the Northern Arapaho tribe.

Yazzie, a sophomore pre-med major from Quapaw, is a member of the Kiowa, Meskalin Apache and Navajo nations. Both students are members of the honors academic program.

"I was invited by the tribe first and then they told me about it. I guess he said something to the tribe because they eventually invited me," said Yazzie.

"We'll be performing one hour, twice a day, at different venues in and around Salt Lake City during our four-day stay. All of the hour performances will be outside while the closing ceremony will be held indoors," Euran said.

With the start of the 2002 Winter Olympics, four Native American tribes will dance the first week.

Then five tribes will perform the second week before the Painted Horse Wardance Society, the Crow Nation, the Ute Nation and the Navajo Nation perform the final week.

"All of my family, as in uncles, aunts nieces and nephews, are members of the opening ceremony as part of the Northern Arapaho dance troupe. I had an opportunity to dance with them, but I decided I couldn't miss two weeks of classwork," said Euran.

"Because there will be a no-fly zone in effect over Salt Lake City during the closing ceremonies, we won't be able to return to Tulsa until Monday, Feb. 25. We tried and tried to get a flight out on Sunday, but they wouldn't let us leave."

"We're both extremely excited about this opportunity because not only are we performing at the Olympics, but we have a chance to show people from other countries, the cultures and the real Native American culture is like," Euran said.

Freedom has a price

We will remember this semester for the rest of our lives. The attacks of September 11, and the events that are unfolding even now, almost three months later, will occupy a big space in future histories of our times.

On one horrific packed morning in September, Americans were given an unforgettable lesson on one of the pitfalls of living in a free and open society. Any time anyone wishes to do our country harm, the chances are not very good that they can be stopped. In order for us to rend our country free from any future acts of terror, we would be forced to deprive ourselves of many of the freedoms that we cherish.

Along with the wake-up call warning us of our vulnerability, the subsequent actions taken in defense of our homeland serve to remind us of the importance of a government armed with the powers to react quickly to threats both from abroad and within.

Prior to the attacks we were prone, as a people, to refer to the government as "they" or "them." We had forgotten, or had not been taught, that our government is "us" and "we".

Criticism comes much easier when it's "them" than when it's "us". Terrorism has forcefully brought home the fact that there is no "us" and "them" in this country.

We will remember this period for the rest of our lives. Like our ancestors after Pearl Harbor, we now have a unifying, though terrible purpose.

A man has been handed to the citizens of the United States, and by extension our government, to make it so painful for terrorists to carry out their vile activities that they will think twice about it.

We must carry out this mandate with some very important things to keep in mind. First we must be successful. To ensure success, we must take our responsibilities as citizens seriously.

We must use our right to vote wisely in order to put the people in positions of authority who are the most qualified to get the job done.

Secondly, we must insure that our freedoms remain intact. Although submission to the rule of law naturally limits individual freedom, our job, indeed our obligation, is to make sure, through our process of free elections, that our desire for order and safety does not overshadow or our need for freedom.

We must never forget the wisdom of the wise American who once said, "those who would sacrifice their freedoms for order deserve neither."

Williams' Wonders
by Jerry Williams

This should be a very enjoyable time of year. One semester down, one more to go, then summer.

Classes, for the most part, aren't as bad as they could be, except for the ones that make you get up at 7. In short, everything is going along just great. I was starting to get that smug, self-assured feeling that comes when you think you're smarter than you are.

Then it all came tumbling down. All it took to ruin my whole ego trip was one brief trip to the campus book store.

I hear some of my buddies now. "You paid $55.00 for a paper back book? Boy, they really saw you comin', didn't they?"

Speechless. That's what I was after I read the price tag on my math book, $86.00. For a math book that costs $98.00, I think I deserve to have Stephen Hawking for an instructor.

The young lady at the book store cash register probably needs several counseling sessions after listening toirate customers like me.

It's not her fault. I know that. But when the inevitable eruption came, she was the closest target.

In my opinion, this school book price gouging has gotten way out of hand.

If I weren't such a nice guy, I'd swear there were some kickbacks being kicked back somewhere along the road from writer to bookstore.

The cost of a college education is expensive enough as it is. I'd like to know just how much the authors of a $98.00 school book make per copy.

I'd like to know who, besides the publisher, is pocketing the rest of that money.

Don't get me wrong. I'm a die hard capitalist and I believe in the free enterprise system.

I just don't like to be taken advantage of.

Ogle observes several changes as director of food services

Kathryn Banks

Keeping pace with changing technologies has been one of the constant challenges for Loyd Ogle, director of auxiliary food services. "When I first came here, our food services were operated more like the high school. Students had to stand in line waiting with their tray for food," said Ogle.

"Although there has been a lot of changes over the years, the day we took on the concept of self-service is a week for a faster pace, and more convenient way of serving food." So far we have already added the pizza, ice cream machine, different flavor coffee in the stack bar and a couple of items to the breakfast menu. Ogle, who graduated from N.E.O. in 1970, became a member of college staff in 1964 after earning a degree in Hotel & Restaurant Management from the Oklahoma State University.

When Ogle returned to N.E.O. to work, he first served as an assistant to the cafeteria manager. He became director of auxiliary services when former director Jim Tairo retired in 1970. "Right now we have about 200 students using meal tickets, and on average we feed 400-450 students every day," Ogle said.

"We also do have various meal plan options for commuter students. For a ticket for one meal is $4.59. Commuters can save some money buying a 10-day meal ticket for $35.

"All in all, I oversee the total operation of the school's vending machines, stack bar, game room, ballroom, some of the dorms, and athletic food services. Basically, I am responsible for the whole Student Union building," said Ogle.

"We work close with the Student Body Government to make sure students enjoy the N.E.O. cafeteria. I truly work on an ad hoc basis, with the financial aid office to keep track of the delivery of meal items as well as beverages on a daily basis."

"We are able to be on board with new ideas based on students' needs and desires," said Ogle.

Student's parents defend country

By Don Stamps

With the attack on America, many families across the country were separated for the holidays by the War on Terrorism. For one Miami family, this became a reality in late September.

Lori Nigh, a 19-year-old sophomore from Miami, has seen one family member shipped off to defend the country and could see another family member go too.

Bill Culver, Lori's father, got the word in late September that he may be called into service. Being a naval reserve officer, the family knew that he could be called out as soon as the war on terrorism began.

Culver was shipped out to Millington, Tenn., on Nov. 11, where he is serving as a military police officer. Culver enlisted in the Army at age 18 and has since retired from the service. He is now a Miami Special District Judge. His absence affects both his family and the community.

The family could see another member called into service. Nigh's mother, Fay Culver, is also in the naval reserve. Her troop has been put on warning that they too could get the call, and if they do they will be shipped over sea.

This would not be Fay Culver's first experience defending her country. She served in the Desert Storm conflict.

Fay Culver is also involved in the community through her work as Director of Miami Main Street. A group that is responsible for public events throughout the community.

The Culver family got a brief treat over Thanksgiving holiday when Bill Culver came home for three days.

"He got to come home for three days, and there is a chance that he also came home for Christmas," said Nigh.

"I was a little upset when my dad first got called up, but I am able to accept that he is helping to defend our country. We all have to support our troops." This holiday season was a little tough for Nigh, but she was able to look at the lighter side of things too.

Learning Resources Center

NEWS & VIEWS

by Shanne Brown

"Knowledge is of two kinds: we know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find information upon it," Samuel Johnson, English author.

Inside information, those well-preserved hints and strategies passed down from upper to lower classroom each year at N.E.O., that's what it is all about. Who gives the hardest tests? Do they really mean "No Parking"? Where do we go to get girls?

Tests, parking and dating aside, one source of inside information to N.E.O. students should neglect is the campus Learning Resource Center and Library.

The LRC collection contains 80,000 books including fiction, reference materials, biographies, a short-story collection and children's titles. It also contains subscriptions to 350 periodical and magazines, an audiovisual reserve desk with music, films and computing software, electronic access to 33 searchable databases, most of which are full-text, and a state of the art internet ready computer lab.

Along with the premises of the LRC is the home to the N.E.O. archive, which contains: original photos, publications and memorabilia dating back to the founding of the school in 1919, and the #1 British Flying Training School archives, a collection of materials documenting the training of British combat pilots for World War II that took place here in Miami.

The college library is also the future home of a brand new coffee bar which will open sometime early in the spring of 2002 semester. All N.E.O. students are invited to enjoy their favorite high-octane caffeine fix while they study or socialize between classes.

Other coming attractions this semester include the continued display of original inspired creations by N.E.O. student artists, the celebration of Black History Month, the observance of National Library Week, and the national "Get Caught Reading" campaign.

With so much going on, there is something for everyone to enjoy. Unsure of where to start or how to use the LRC? The library staff members and student aides are here to help you. They are valuable guides as you navigate through complete research projects, search for information on the Internet, or look for recreational reading material.

According to the American Library Association and American Library Association, students go to school, public and academic libraries more than twice as often as they go to the movies, and there are more public libraries than McDonald's - a total of 16,000.

In these libraries reference librarians answer more than seven million questions weekly, and academic librarians will answer 97 million reference questions this year alone. One of those lucky satisfied searches could be you. See you in the Library!
Norsemen drop heartbreaker

After Bi-State Athletic Conference games with archrival Comores State on Monday in Miami, the Norse travel to Fort Smith, Ark., Thursday to face the Lions of the University of Arkansas/Fort Smith.

Entering the Comores game the Norsemen were 2-2 in the conference and 7-4 overall.

NIE will travel to Enid on Monday for an 8 p.m. game with Northern College of Enid.

Murray State 66-Norse 65

Two free throws by Mike Curran with just four seconds left carried the Murray State College Aggies to a 66-65 upset of the Golden Norsemen last Saturday in the Beames Fieldhouse at Tishomingo.

"The kids played hard the entire game. They battled all night and never quit." Unfortunately, the game came down to one call and it didn’t go our way," Spencer said.

Currie, a 5-11 freshman point guard from Okmulgee, drove the lane with 4.5 seconds showing on the clock and the Norse holding a 65-64 lead. NIE guard Rick Bruner and Brandon Daniels converged on Currie and were called for a foul.

"Brandon and Rick clearly stopped the play after Rafael (Francisco) had given us the lead with 10 seconds left. But, the call went against us and Currie hit both free throws," said Spencer.

NIE freshman Alfred Neal took the ensuing inbounds pass and dribbled to near the 3-point arch, but his shot at the buzzer rimmed out to end the game.

Neal led the Norse with 13 total points while Queen added 11 points.

Currier scored 14 points to lead Murray State while Johnson tallied 11 and both Woodall and Bony contributed 10 points each.

Norse 115-Carl Albert 82

Paced by the 30-point performance by freshman Alfred Neal the Norsemen defeated Carl Albert State College, 115-82, last Thursday night before a partisan crowd in the NIE Fieldhouse.

"I was very pleased at half the way the way we were playing because we talked to the kids about our ability to score," said Spencer.

"We also talked to them about stepping up their defensive intensity and taking away second shots and easy baskets."

"During a seven to 10 minute period in the second half our kids played tremendous defense. We were from a 19-point lead to a 25 or 30 point lead because we played very solid defense and didn’t let them climb back into the game," Spencer said.

Neal sank 4 of 6 from 2-point range and 7 of 9 from the 3-point arch along with 1 of 2 at the free throw line to lead both teams in scoring. Franco contributed 18 points while Queen scored 16, March 14, Bruner 13 and Daniels 11 points for the Norse.

Belton paced Carl Albert with 20 points while Boudin added 17 and Greer scored 15 points.

Eastern 93-Norse 74

The inability to win the battle on the boards sent the Northeastern A&M Golden Norsemen to a 93-76 defeat at the hands of Eastern Oklahoma College Jan. 17, in Wilburton’s Claude C. Danug Fieldhouse.

"Eastern shot the ball extremely well tonight which cost us, said Spencer. "We shot the ball well enough to get a win, but we didn’t do it with consistenpity.

"I thought we were doing a good job defensively early in the game, but they charged the tempo and we wanted some opportunities to control tempo and get into too much of a running game with them."

"We had too many turnovers in the first half. It’s pretty hard to sustain effort when your down by double-digit figures," Spencer said.

Neal led the Golden Norse with 18 points while Jonathon March contributed 12 and Daniels added 11 points.

Marcos Toppin paced the Mountaineers with 25 points while Greg Lammens tallied 20 points.

South Plains 86-Norse 67

The Golden Norsemen dropped a 86-67 decision to the seventh-ranked Texans of South Plains College, Jan. 4, in Levelland.

Freshman center Fabio Torres led the Norse with 15 total points.

"We struggled offensively against South Plains and fell behind by 20 in the first half," said Spencer.

"We cut the lead to nine late in the second half, but we missed too many free throws down the stretch."

Norse 80-Frank Phillips 79

Traveling to Borger on Jan. 5, the Golden Norsemen rallied from a 16-point deficit in the first to trail 91-95 at halftime en route to a 82-78 victory over Frank Phillips College.

"We got a lot of contributions from different people. We played 12 people and they all had a part in this win," Spencer said.

West Plains 102-Norse 70

Unable to overcome a 16-point halftime deficit the Golden Norsemen suffered a 102-70 loss to 11th-ranked Northwest Missouri State/West Plains, Jan. 2 in the West Plains, Mo., Civic Center.

Neal led the Golden Norse with 19 total points while Michael Hill tallied 15 and Mike Johnson added 10 points.

Both Doug Blackburn and Rusty Thompson scored 15 points each to lead the Grizzlies. Quandale Moore contributed 13 points while David Stephens added 10 points.

North 85-Western 86 (OT)

Playing in their second consecutive overtime game, the Norsemen defeated Bi-State Athletic Conference for Western Oklahoma College, 89-86, Dec. 15 in the NIE Fieldhouse.

During the five-minute overtime period the Golden Norsemen played great defense and held the Texans to just two free throws by Daniels.

Both Queen and Daniels each tallied 13 total points to lead the Golden Norse while Franco contributed 15 points.

Don Haff paced Western with 18 points while Terry LeMelle scored 16, Clifford Davis 13 and Ronnie Jones 11 points.
Lady Norse remain atop national poll

Sitting atop both the weekly National Junior College Athletic Association poll and the Bi-State Athletic Conference, the Lady Norse have built a 14-game winning streak.

Prior to a home game with Connors State last Monday, the Lady Norse were 11-0 on the season and 4-0 in the conference. After traveling to Fort Smith, Ark., Thursday for a 6 p.m. conference contest with the University of Arkansas-Fort Smith, the Lady Norse travel to Enid on Monday, Jan. 25, for a 5 p.m. league game with Northern Oklahoma-Finney.

Lady Norse 106-Murray 48

While allowing several players to gain valuable court time, Northeastern A&M’s number one ranked Lady Norse cruised to a 106-48 rout over Murray State College last Saturday at Beames Fieldhouse in Tahlequah.

Lady Norse starting guard Maria Villarreal and center Lucimara Silva sat out the game to get ready for Mondays class with arch-rival Connors State College.

“We decided to let Maria and Lu sit out the Murray game so they could let some nagging injuries heal a little bit. We felt like it was more important to have them rested and ready to go against Connors than to risk aggravating the bumps and bruises they already have,” said Lady Norse head coach B.J. Smith.

Topping the century scoring mark for the ninth time this season, the Lady Norse received points from all 11 players in the lopsided victory over the Murray State Lady Aggies. Six of the players scored in double figures. Carina Souza paced the Lady Norse with 15 total points while Sami Jo Conon scored 13, Mish Shellford 12 and Kaezy Iman, Jade Lamb and Brandi Russell 11 points each.

Brittany Carter led the Lady Aggies with 17 points while McGowan added 10 points.
